FOG: Fats, Oils & Grease

FOG or fats, oils, and grease have been key criminals in the war on clogs for decades. When poured down sink drains, these viscous villains buildup, prevent the flow of water and eventually block pipes completely. If wastewater can't move freely through pipes and out into the sewer system, it can back up into your home and can cause unsanitary conditions and damages that can be expensive to repair. Grease clogs sanitary sewer system much like bad cholesterol and fatty acids clog arteries in the human body. Known agents of FOG include meat fats (bacon, sausage, beef), lard, cooking oil, butter, baking products, milk and dairy products, and other food scraps.

SAVE YOUR SINK

Whether leftovers, peelings, or byproducts, food should never go down the sink! Remember the 3 C's of sink safety: Cool, Contain, Can

1. Cool: Let the grease cool and solidify in your cooking pot/pan
2. Contain: Scrape FOG and excess food scraps into a secure, sealable container like a peanut butter jar. Before washing, wipe down pots and pans with a paper towel
3. Can: Throw the full container of FOG and your paper towel into a trashcan.
